Houston Book H, 0.0.0

It is, perhaps, an error to subscribe one's self on the title page of a volume such as this as the "author" of the material contained herein. More correctly one is only the compiler of data collected from many sources and coordinated into one coherent picture.

There are many branches of the HUSTON family. In the course of research of this group, other New England families have come to light, and for the sake of those whose descents are from these other sources, I offer the following references.

The lines of descent from WILLIAM HUSTON OF FALMOUTH MAINE, gathered together by Philip Howard Harris, are available in a manuscript volume in the D.A.R. library at Washington, D.C., and in the Library at the Minnesota Historical Society at St. Paul, Minn.

The lines of descent from JAMES AND MARY (SLOSS) HUSTON of Damariscotta, Maine, compiled by Dr. Henry A. Huston, and edited and arranged into a manuscript copy by Aimee Huston Eck, are available on microfilm at the manuscript department of the Minnesota Historical Society at St. Paul, Minnesota.

The lines of descent from SAMUEL HOUSTON OF LONDONDERRY, NEW HAMPSHIRE, plus miscellaneous data on various unplaced Huston families of New England, are available in the D.A.R. Library at Washington, D.C. and in the Minnesota Historical Society at St. Paul, Minn., in the volume entitled "MISCELLANEOUS RECORDS FROM MINNESOTA D.A.R. 1950."

In the compiling of the present volume, I have received aid from so many people that it would be quite impossible to acknowledge them all by name. But there have been a few without whom the book could never have been written, and to them I wish to express my appreciation and deep gratitude for their interest and help.

To Miss Marjorie Case, at the Connecticut State Library at Hartford, Conn., for continually searching the Connecticut records for me.

To Mr. Robert Preston, of Wyncote, Pa., who found the Robert[2] Huston line.

To Mrs. Will Snavely of Foley, Minnesota, for her carefully kept records of the Benjamin Huston branch of the family.

To Mrs. A. I. Dodge of Lackawanna, N.Y. for her search for the Wayne and Ontario county families.

To Mrs. Walter K. Adams of Minneapolis, for her unfailing help in suggesting how and where and what to search, her encouragement of the flagging spirit when seeming "dead ends" were reached.

To my father, Arthur Huston, for his splendid account of the early Dakota pioneer days.

These, and many others, should rightfully be placed upon the title page as the co-authors of this book.

Aimee Huston Eck.

INTRODUCTION

A Genealogy is never done. If it were, there would be far less point in writing it, for it would be a dead thing, a dull record of the past, and indicating not at all the shape of things to come.

Instead, it is a pause for a moment in the ever-moving stream of life. It is designed for a dual purpose. It is a factual account of our forbears, allowing us to see our family relationships in clearer perspective. But its greater function is to give us a personal approach to history, to see the part our ancestors played in the great panorama, and to give us pause to reflect whether we are worthy of the things they have built for us, and left to us, to carry on.

Compilers of some family genealogies are fortunate in finding many records in the printed sources from which to gather their material. The lines of descent from William Huston have been very hard to find, and have necessitated intense research into vital records, family bibles, as well as countless inquiries to individuals in many family branches.

Many who seek data within these pages will be disappointed. Family lines in many places come to a standstill, due to many causes; lack of records, or lack of ingenuity on the part of the compiler to unearth them; lack of cooperation from some descendant branches in furnishing vital information from their private family records; lack of funds to travel and research all parts of the American landscape to which these descendants have spread.

The compiler fervently hopes that the sins of omission are greater than the sins of commission; she has not attempted a complete genealogy, but she has indeed attempted an accurate one. It is my sincere conviction that there has never been brought together in any printed or manuscript volume the coordinated story of these lines of descent from William Huston of Voluntown, and if such a manuscript exists, the material contained herein has been compiled independently of it, and without my knowledge of its existence.

To the known descendants of William Huston who live today, this book is dedicated, in the hope that they will take pride in the sturdy American heritage they have, and at the same time feel their humble obligation to carry on the civic obligations bequeathed them by their pioneer forefathers who helped to build for them a democratic nation.

Even as this modest endeavor takes its final form, some within its pages are dying, and some not in its pages are being born. If we waited, it would never be written, for, as Omar Khayyam said:

"We are no other than a moving row
Of visionary Shadow-shapes that come and go Round with this Sun-illumin'd Lantern held
In midnight by the Master of the Show.

Impotent Pieces of the Games He plays
Upon this Chequer-board of Nights and Days;
Hither and thither moves, and checks and slays,
And one by one back in the Closet lays.

And fear not lest Existence closing your Account, should lose, or know the type no more;
The Eternal Saki from that Bowl has pour'd
Millions of Bubbles like us, and will pour.

When you and I behind the Veil are past,
Oh, but the long long while the World shall last,
Which of our Coming and Departure heeds
As much as Ocean of a pebble cast."

--The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam.

WILLIAM HUSTON

OF VOLUNTOWN, CONNECTICUT

ca 1720-1777

THE HOUSTON-HUSTON CLAN OF SCOTLAND

There is considerable evidence that the name of Huston, Houston, Hughston, and all other variants originated with the Norman Knight, Sir Hugh de Padvinan, who came to Scotland in the time of William the Conqueror of England. For saving the life of Canmore Malcolm III, King of the Scots, de Padvinan was knighted and given a big estate in Renfrewshire. His place came to be known as "Hugh's Town" the word "town" being yet used in Scotland to designate a farmsteading, a castle homestead, or a baronial establishment. The natives could not pronounce the Norman name so compromised by referring to Hugh's Town - that is, Sir Hugh de Padvinan's place, and the name took, so that in time it superseded Padvinan, and the place became the Barony of Houston, and the name the only family name.

Houston was of Territorial origin from the old barony of the name in Lanarkshire. The ancient family of Houston originally bore the name of Padivan, or Padvinan, from the place of that name in Lanarkshire.

In the reign of Malcolm IV, Baldwin de Bigre gave the lands of Kilpeter to Hugh de Padvinan, who appears as a witness to the foundation charter of the Abbey of Paisley between 1165-1173.

Hugh's son Reginald obtained from Robert, son of Waldev, son of Baldwin de Bigre, a confirmation of these lands. Hugh, son of Reginald, obtained a charter from Walter Fitz-Alan, the High Steward.

The barony had now taken its Saxon name from the settlement of the first of these old lords - Huston or "Villa Hugonis."

In "The Hustons and their Descendants" 1450-1912, by E. Rankin Huston, appears the following account:

"At an early period in the history of the Houstons, John Houston with a body of soldiers reinforced a broken column and for his great courage and unexampled energy was knighted on the field of battle. The greyhounds supporting the shield indicate the fleetness of his command in coming to the rescue; the "last sand" of the hour glass in the crest, the perilous extremity of the army, and the motto above the crest "In Time" its victory."

The Houstons dwelt in the lowlands of Scotland and the Coat of Arms registered in the Government office at London indicates their standing was elevated. They took a stand in favor of Reformation, adopted the tenets of Calvin, sustained the views of John Knox, were persecuted as Presbyterians for rigid adherence to the Bible. Many fled to the North of Ireland and were probably there in 1699 after the siege of Londonderry. The family seat is in Renfrewshire.

Burke's Encyclopedia of Heraldry gives two explanations of the crest and shield, varying slightly.

"Houston (Scotland) Or, a chev. chequy, sa. and ar. between three martlets of the second. Crest - a sandglass winged ppr. Supporters (borne by the family in right of their being ancient hereditary barons of Scotland) on either side a greyhound ppr, collared and chained, or. Motto (over the crest) "In Time."

"Houstoun (Renfrew, Johnstone Co.) That Ilk; an ancient Scottish family which obtained a baronetcy. Or, a chev chequy, azure and ar. between three martlets sa. Crest, a sandglass ppr. Supporters, on either side a greyhound ar, collared and chain reflexed over back, or. Motto, "In Time."

The Houston family came from Scotland to the North of Ireland with many other families such as the Campbells, Kennedys, Stuarts, Hinmans, into whose families they intermarried.

Although scattered individuals of that name may have emigrated to America at an earlier date, most of them came in the vast immigration of the Scotch-Irish from the North of Ireland around the years of 1719 following.

There were many branches of Huston families in America, in Maine, Pennsylvania, and Virginia. Fairly adequate account has been rendered in at least two genealogies, that of S. R. Houston, 1882, and that of E. Rankin Huston, who have taken up the Pennsylvania and Southern branches. The author has in manuscript the lines of Samuel and Mary (Cargill) Houston of Londonderry, N. H. by Neil Parker; William Huston of Falmouth, Me. by P. H. Harris; James and Mary (Sloss) Huston of Damariscotta, Me. by Dr. Henry Huston which will be edited and published later.

This volume is concerned only with the family of WILLIAM HUSTON, of Voluntown, Connecticut, whose relationship to these other branches is at present undetermined, but whose ancestral forbears, like all the other Houston-Huston family who bear the name, spring from this same Scottish clan.

WILLIAM HUSTON OF VOLUNTOWN, CONNECTICUT AND SOME OF HIS DESCENDANTS.

I GENERATION.

1. William[1] Huston

He settled in Voluntown, Connecticut, and was the first of the line of the Connecticut family. Whether he emigrated to America as a young man, or came over with his parents, has not yet been definitely determined.

In 1864 Mrs. Annie Hopkins Lumpkin, widow of Governor Lumpkin of Georgia, stated that she was of William Huston who with his brother John Houston and widowed mother Mrs. John Houston, emigrated to Pennsylvania from Ireland, and that after some time John went south, but William remained in the North.

General Sam Houston of Texas (fourth generation descent from Samuel[3] and Elizabeth Paxton, Robert[2] Huston and Margaret Davidson, John[1] Huston and Elizabeth Cunningham) became acquainted with the Northern branch of the Huston family, and established the relationship to William Huston to John of Pennsylvania. This relationship is probable, but has not been definitely proven to the satisfaction of the author at this date.

The diary of Joshua Hempstead, covering 1711-1758, Collections of New London Historical Society Vol I, published 1901, p. 379, has the following item:

> 1741, Weds July 1: "Mr. Huston.....ern till 10 o'clock att night or therebouts & then he went off singing to....."

From Mrs. Schuster, in Kenmore, N. Y. a descendant, came a rather cursory family history compiled by a Jennings, now dead, who carried the line back to William of Voluntown and stated that William Huston was born in Tyrone, Ireland, and came to this country when a boy. His mother, widowed, married a Douglas, and brought the family to America.

There is no record in Connecticut of such a marriage, but the Voluntown Vital Records show a marriage of an Elizabeth Huston on Jan. 29, 1730 to Robert Dixson (John, Robert, David, John) born 1701.

> The Harvey Book, p. 410, states that Robert Dixson was married 1722 in Ireland to wife not known, who died 1724 in Ireland. He came over in 1726 with little daughter Agnes to and Jane M. Cox of Philadelphia.

3. Declaration.

1. Military Duties

He enlisted in Baltimore, Pennsylvania, and was the first of the line of the Connecticut family, which he organized to Defense of Liberty. Although he was over fifty his patriotism was not less than that of younger men.

In 1864 Rev. Jamie Hopkins Dingwall, pastor of Scrymgeour Presbyterian Church, stated that his son, William Duncan Dingwall, and Thomas Dingwall were the brothers from Baltimore and Richmond Hopkins, Esq. Jamie Dingwall was married from Ireland, and that there was some long work there, but William remained in Baltimore.

Records Jan Dingwall of Lord Fleming Monmouth, dressed from Chapel and Glenarvon Peter, Virginia Bureau and Trinity Corporation, John- Baltimore Citizen Dingwall Jane, Baltimore Mortgage Bureau of the Supreme Liberty, and Citizen the relationship to Trinity Co-Jane to John of Pennsylvania. This Corporation of Liberty, but but you Deed of Liberty proved to the Association of the Nation in Anti Wars.

The diary of Jamie Dingwall, covering 1774-1795. Colonization of Jane Junction Philadelphia Bonding Co. 2 published 1872. pp 270, her the following items:

1774, March 21: "Mr. Dingwall ... Jane ... Trinity Corporation ... I find ... well, all things to ... ."

From Mrs. Dingwall, in Rockaway, Va., a document, from a leading attorney family letter concerning a Jane case, who carried his claim back to William of Virginia and Colonel Thos. Dingwall was born in Tyrone. Ireland, and went to this country as a boy. His mother, widowed, married a Dingwall, and brought the family to America.

There is no record of Commencement of this a Virginia, but the following Virginia also a Burial Edge of Mr. William Dingwall on Jan. 17, from the Dennis Dingwall (Colo, Hotels, Devil, Colon, Dingwall).

The Bryan Book, p. 41, states that Joseph Dingwall was married 1760 in Ireland to Mrs. ... Bryan, who died 1776 in Ireland. He came over in 1760 with Irish daughter Agnes to Boston, then New London, Conn., and married Elizabeth Huston. Their child was John Dixson, born Nov. 16, 1733, in Voluntown, and married Jan. 5, 1758 Jean Gordon, and they had two children, Elizabeth, born Voluntown, Mar. 18, 1763, living in 1791, unmarried.

Rebecca, born April 13, 1765, married Mar. 18, 1790 Alexander Dorrance, son of Samuel and Rebecca (Gordon) Dorrance, grandson of the Rev. Samuel Dorrance.

I propose that she may be the widow mentioned in the family material and that she married Dixson, not Douglas.

Our first official record of William[1] Huston is the Voluntown Presbyterian Church record of his admittance in 1738.

Also in the Voluntown Presbyterian Church appears the name of MIRIAM HUSTON, admitted August 1735.

In the Hopkins Marriages by Clemens, 1916, is the following:

Hopkins, James, and Miriam Hyston at Preston Conn. on June 21, 1749.

I propose she was the sister of William of Voluntown.

William Huston was married, according to the Voluntown Vital Records, on May 28, 1745 by the Rev. Samuel Dorrance, at Voluntown to Agnes Hinman.

It is not within the scope of this genealogy to trace the lines of the wives, but it might be interesting to present the probable line of Agnes Hinman, as she was "the mother of them all."

Family material states that Mr. James Hinman and his wife Margaret, born in Scotland, emigrated to America. He was a drummer boy of 16 in King William's Army at the battle of the Boyne. This would place his birth date at 1672, since the battle of the Boyne was fought in 1688. They settled at Voluntown, and had three children, Nancy, John and Margaret. (Nancy and Agnes were interchangeable names in the Scotch-Irish families.)

Elizabeth Huston's daughter Nancy Campbell told her children she saw the sword born by her great-grandfather James Hinman at the Battle of the Boyne, and that her uncle, John Houston used to roll it up and put it in a half-bushel, that it was very long, and bright, with a network of metal to shield the hand of the wielder.

There is undoubtedly some truth to these family traditions of the Hinmans, but it is the author's opinion that Agnes-Nancy Hinman was the daughter of Robert and Margaret Hinman of Voluntown, and that Robert was probably the emigrant, and son of the James Hinman discussed above. Robert and Margaret appear on the Voluntown records, while James does not.

As support for these contentions, the list of the children of William and Agnes Hinman Huston is significant. It was practically an invariable rule in the Scotch-Irish families that the first son was named for the husband's father, the second son for the wife's father, the third son for the husband, and the girls named in like order. A study of the naming of the children, below, bears out this pattern significantly.

William Huston died on December 23, 1777, at Voluntown, and his will was proved Feb. 3, 1778. All his children, as well as his wife Agnes, are given equally in the will, and the children correspond exactly with the record of the town clerk's office in Voluntown.

In his will, he gives "my right in the Susquehanna Lands, so called." The Susquehanna Land Co. records show him to be a purchaser in that venture in 1759, along with many of the Voluntown group. It is extremely doubtful that he ever went to that section, which was on the border of New York and Pennsylvania, but merely made the investment as a subscriber.

The family had very close connections into Preston, Conn., as the Preston Church records show the dates of baptism of each of the children below, and of some of the later family of Robert and Joseph. Many of the records are in both the Voluntown Vital Records and those of Preston.

In the Voluntown records, 2nd Book, page 169, there is a deed from Patrick McCallen and Elizabeth to William Huston of Voluntown, land, on Sept. 4, 1740, by Ebenezer Dow.

m. October 4, 1781 at Voluntown, Elizabeth Campbell[4] who was b. Feb. 12, 1757 (Charles[3], Charles[2], Robert[1], Ulster, Ireland to New London and Voluntown 1719). d. Feb. 20, 1851 Henrietta, New York.

d. Nov. 11, 1849, ages 92, at Henrietta, New York, buried in the Titus burial Lot, Maplewood Cemetery on the middle road between East and West Henrietta.

He and his wife left Voluntown after the birth of his second child, and went to Vermont, and were in Rupert in the 1790 census. They then came to Lebanon, Madison County, New York, with the Campbell family of Voluntown; they were there at least by 1802, when Elizabeth Huston appears among the charter members of the Congregational Church. He then went to Ontario, Wayne County, New York and was there in 1828, settling a mile and a half south of Lake Side. They removed to Henrietta, Monroe County in 1832, to live with their son-in-law and daughter, Nancy and Samuel Titus, where they died.

An abstract of his Revolutionary War Pension record W.C.#7847, follows:

Affadavit: April 29, 1818, William Huston, 61 of Lebanon, Madison Co. N.Y. swears he enlisted in Stonington, Conn. in Capt. James Eldredge's Co, Col. Samuel N. Parsons' Regiment (later commanded by Col. John Tyler) - served until Dec. 31, 1776, when he was discharged at Peekskill, New York. About the 20th of June 1780 at Groton, Conn, enlisted in a company commanded by (name forgotten) but was transferred to a company commanded by Capt. Munson (light infantry) served until Dec. 9, 1780 when he was discharged at the Highlands, New York.

On Aug. 19, 1820, he was of Henrietta, N. Y. (Ontario Co.) aged 64, Schedule of Income: Nine Pigs, $4.00; five chairs, $2.50; One axe $1.00, one hoe $.50; one note on hand $12.50, one plough, $5.00 - says occupation is a weaver and family consists of my wife who is very weakly and unable to do any labor.

Certified copy of marriage "William Huston and Elizabeth Campbell were lawfully joined in Marriage Oct. 4, 1781 by Rev. Solomon Morgan (Cert. by town clerk of Voluntown in 1850).

--Note attached to cert. pension claim says William Huston resides at Henrietta and has resided there five years, previous in Lebanon, Madison Co. N.Y. (appears dated 1825).

Affadavit: Aug 8, 1850 - by Elizabeth Huston, 93 of Henrietta, Monroe Co. N.Y. swears she is widow of William Huston, swears to date of marriage as above listed - that W.H. died Nov. 11, 1849, that she was Elizabeth Campbell.

Affadivit: Aug. 8, 1850 - by Judge Samuel Titus now in 69th year, of Henrietta - swears he knew W. H. for about 33 years, that W. H. and Elizabeth (wife) were of Henrietta and resided with him when William died on Nov. 11, 1849.

William was a juror in Lebanon, N.Y. in 1808. The author has visited the graves of William and Elizabeth in Henrietta, and finds that the New York Veterans have placed a Revolutionary War service marker at William's grave.

Children of William and Elizabeth:

(As taken from the bible record of Mary Jane Enos Huston, wife of his son Charles, and also from the list of the heirs of Elizabeth Huston's intestate estate on file at county court house, Monroe Co. N.Y.)

11. i Charles Campbell[3], b. Nov. 15, 1782 in Conn.

12. ii Nancy[3], b. Aug. 14, 1785, in Conn.

13. iii William[3], b. Sept. 1, 1793, in Rupert Town, Vermont.

14. iv John[3], b. Nov. 7, 179-. Elizabeth Huston's estate says "son John Huston "of Texas", but when he went there or anything further of him is not known. There is, in Lester Card's mss. of Onandaga Co. N.Y. the marriage of a John Huston and Maria Edy (Eddy?) in 1836 in Syracuse, N.Y. Since there was no other family of Hustons known in that area at that time, it might conceivably be the above John. Family material also says that when he got to Texas he changed his name spelling to Houston, and of course, with the huge Sam Houston lines of Texas, search proved impossible.

15. v Archibald[3], b. June 16, 1799, in New York State.

16. vi Betsey[3], b. Sept. 18, 1802, in New York State.

WILL OF JOSEPH HUSTON,

Town of Voluntown,
Date, 1788, No. 1121.

Plainfield Probate District.

In the name of God Amen! The 28th day of August, A.D.1787.

I, Joseph Huston of Voluntown, in the County of Windham, in the State of Connecticut, being weak in body but of perfect mind and memory, thanks be given to God therfor -- but calling to mind the mortality of my Body, and knowing that it is appointed for all men once to die, do make and ordain this my last will and testament; that is to say, principally and first of all I give and recommend my soul into the hands of God that gave it, and as for my Body I recommend to the Earth to be buried in a Christian like and decent manner at the discretion of my Executors hereafter named, nothing doubting but at the General Ressurection I shall receive the same by the Almighty power of God.

And as touching such worldly estate as it hath pleased God to bless me with in this life, I give bequeath and dispose of in the following manner and form (viz) after my just debts and Funeral charges are paid (which are to be paid out of my personal estate by my executor hereafter named) I give unto Elisabeth my dearly and well beloved wife the whole of my personal estate as well in as out of doors to be hers and at her own controul during her natural life (excep what is hereafter disposed of in this will to my daughter Alice) I also give and bequeath unto my said wife Elisabeth the Improvement of all my Real Estate untill my daughter Alice arives to the age of eighteen years.

Item: I give and bequeath unto my only child Alice, all my lands or Real Estate in said Voluntown, which I have or ought to have any just right or claim unto, to her, to her heirs and assigns, my daughter Alice to come into full posession thereof when she arrives at the age of Eighteen years. I also give unto my said Daughter Alice one Cow to be paid and delivered to her out of my personal estate at the time of her arriving at the age of Eighteen years old, to be paid to her by my executors hereafter named, and lastly I make, constitute and ordain Allen Campbell of said Voluntown and Elizabeth Huston my well beloved wife jointly to be my only and sole executors to this my last will and testament, and I do hereby utterly disallow, disannul and revoke all and every other former testament will or wills, legacies bequeaths and Executors by me in any wise before this time named, willed or bequeathed, ratifying and confirming this and no other to be my last will and testament in witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal the day and year above written. Signed, sealed, published, pronounced and delivered by the said Joseph Huston as his last will and testament in presence of us as witnesses.

Joseph Huston.

Windham County.

In Voluntown on the 3rd day of May A.D. 1788 personally appeared Mr. Benjamin Gallup, John Huston, and Nathaniel Gallup and made solemn oath that they saw the above named Joseph Huston now deceased sign, seal, publish, pronounce and deliver this his last will and testament on the 28th day of August A. D. 1787 and that he was of sound and disposing mind and memory and that they all signed as witnesses in presence of each other at the same time.

Sworn before me, Joseph Wylie, Justice of Peace.

7. Thomas[2] Huston (William[1])

b. Mar. 12, 1767 at Voluntown, Conn.

m. Susannah Campbell (Charles[3], Charles[2], Robert[1])

Thomas settled near the Campbell Lot No. 26 in Lebanon, New York, says the History of Madison County, by Hammond. Mr. Tuttle's personal collection of Madison County families at Clockville, New York, state that he settled in Lebanon in 1806, on lot 59, and that he "moved to Michigan" in 1831. He was a juror in Lebanon in 1827.

Land record of Madison County, Indenture Dec. 13 1823 conveyed to Thomas Huston property lot S.W. subdivision of lot 64 town of Lebanon, by David Cathart, Lord Allaway, Robert Troup, power of attorney.

Family material from Mrs. Schuster of Kenmore,N.Y. states that Thomas married (2) Patricia Wilby, and (3) her sister, Mary Wilby. Search for such marriage records has been unproductive, but if the record of the will of the Thomas Huston shown below is this same Thomas Huston, he could have married Mary, at least, since he leaves to wife Maria.

A search for the Wilby family has been made, but nothing documentary has been found. Recently a genealogist in central New York familiar with the names and locations of these families, states that it is entirely probable that the name of Wilby is a contraction of Willoughby, a family whose descendants are still living in the vicinity of Ithaca, New York.

If Thomas Huston moved to Michigan in 1831, he may have been one of the victims of the land deals through the Holland Land Company, which were operating in the Madison county area, and westward. It is also possible that he returned from Michigan to New York.

Herewith are presented the records of a Thomas Huston of the area. I cannot prove he is the Thomas of this family, but the evidence is strongly pointed that he may be, for the family material states he was an ardent Baptist.

The Madison County Baptist Association mentions Thomas Huston several times. In 1832 he was a delegate from Cazenovia Village to meeting at Pitcher; in 1835 was licentiate delegate from Cazenovia to Lebanon; in 1836 to Lebanon; in 1842 delegate from Chittenango to Madison; 1843, from Chittenango to Lebanon, and in 1844 to Morrisville.

From a letter from Chittenango to the Association meeting at Fenner in 1846 "It has pleased God last December to remove by sudden death the former pastor, Thos. Houston, for whom we mourn as a pastor beloved and whose labors among us the Lord had blessed."

in 1858 his name appears as a one-time pastor in the Association.

From the County Court House Surrogate office at Wampsville New York, will of Thomas Huston recorded January 7, 1846:

"I Thomas Huston, village of Chittenango, town of Sullivan, county of Madison, Sept. 20, 1845, give all property to Maria R. Huston, wife." He appoints Thomas Reed of Danube, Herkimer Co. executor, and his wife, Maria R. Huston.

From the Manuscript notes of Otis Simmons Campbell, who wrote the Campbell family of Lebanon (see YOUR ANCESTORS, magazine of Genealogy, for 1948) two children are recorded by Ballard to Thomas Huston and Susannah Campbell.

i Laura[3]

ii Clarissa[3]

The possibilities of following the Thomas Huston line have not been exhausted. Through intensive study of the Willoughby family, and through the Colgate Baptist Records, which are on file in manuscript in the College Library at Hamilton, New York, pertinent data might be uncovered. The author regrets having been unable further to pursue research on this branch of the family during the preparation of this book.

b. Feb. 21, 1774 at Groton, Conn.

She moved with the Hopkins family (see Eliz. Huston[2]) to Washington County, N.Y. where she married on Nov. 15, 1792, Ezekiel Smith, who was born Lexington, Mass. Mar. 28, 1769, son of Ebenezer and Pricilla (Diamond) Smith, of Ebenezer, both of whom served in the battle of Lexington. Ezekiel Smith died at Smith's Basin, Washington Co. N.Y. Jan. 15, 1848.

d. at Smith's Basin Sept. 15, 1860. They are both buried at Kingsbury.

Fuller development of these Smith lines than carried out here can be obtained from the material by Mary Ward Rose, of Camp Hill, Alabama, a descendant of Agnes Campbell, placed in the D.A.R. Miscellaneous Records Book for 1947 in D.A.R. Library, Washington D. C.

10. Annis[3] Hopkins (Elizabeth Huston[2], William[1])

Birth date unknown, she was the youngest child of Elizabeth Huston and her second husband, Samuel Hopkins.

She was educated at home in Middlebury, Vermont, and went to Georgia as governess to the children of the widower, Wilson Lumpkin, who was a sufficiently distinguished figure that a brief account of him is inserted here. Annis Hopkins married him as his second wife.

Wilson Lumpkin was a dominant figure of his day in Georgia. He was constantly in public life from his 16th to his 60th year. He was an ardent Baptist. It was no small thing to serve in Congress with such men as Calhoun, Webster, Clay, Forsyth, Pinkney, and Randolph. Lumpkin Co. Georgia was named in his honor. He was a member of Congress, U. S. Senator; State Legislator 1805-1814; twice Governor of Georgia. (For the above account, I am indebted to Lodowick Hill's account of the "Hills of Wilkes Co. Ga." and to the Encyclopedia Brittanica.)

i Samuel Hopkins[4], b. in Morgan Co. Oct. 17, 1821, d. in Athens, Ga., Feb. 18, 1939. It was said he had a brilliant mind.

ii John Calhoun[4], m. 1870, in Polk Co. Susan Whitehead Rosseau. No issue.

iii Martha Atlanta[4], who m. Dec. 18, 1878 Thomas M. Compton, d. Decatur Ga. 1919. No issue.

"Atlanta's godmother", the youngest daughter of Governor Lumpkin, was christened Marth Wilson Lumpkin, but her second name, Atalanta, was added by her father because her grace and activity reminded him of the "swiftest of all mortals" in Greek mythology.

The first name given Atlanta, Terminus, was never authorized by the legislature. The second, Marthasville, was in honor of Mrs. Compton, and later when the citizens decided the name was too long, they chose her second name, Atalanta, as the name for the city.

When the city was incorporated in Dec. 1847, the second "a" was omitted, whether by intention or through an error of the recording clerk is not known. However, the fact remains that Atlanta was twice named for Mrs. Compton."

(Extract from an Atlanta paper)

11. Charles Campbell[3] Huston (William[2], William[1])

b. Nov. 15, 1782, in Connecticut.

m. on Nov. 15, 1809, Lydia White, who was born Nov. 13, 1789. This marriage is from the family bible, and does not state where married. Research has failed to disclose the parentage of Lydia White; the 1850 census of Mazan Ill, shows her birth place as New York State.

d. Feb. 25, 1854, at Mazan, Grundy Co. Ill.

Charles C. settled in Lebanon, Madison County, New York, on a lot near the Campbells. He was a member of the Madison County Agricultural Society in 1842, and was town commissioner in 1830. He paid a bounty of $3.90 for raising silkworms in 1840.

In 1845 he and his wife came with their son Charles to Illinois, down the old Chicago-Bloomington trail. He purchased land in Mazon, Grundy County, Illinois, and in the deeds he is called "of Kendall County, Ill". There are no records of conveyances to him at the County Court house at Yorkville, Kendall Co., however, so the preseumption is he did not make any permanent residence until he purchased his Grundy County land.

One of the first things any group of settlers do in establishing a new community is to pick out the site of their cemetery. On the hillside near Old Mazan, such a site was chosen. It is called the Wheeler cemetery, and from the old record books it seems that their grave lots were purchased in ten-grave plots. Such a plot is shown listed to Charles C. Huston, Lot No. 46, in the Graveyard situate on the West half of the S.W. quarter of Section 35, town 32, range 8, for which he paid the sum of $1.50.

No marker is there at the graves of Charles and Lydia, since the old wooden markers first placed have been burned away, and no one knew that Charles and Lydia had indeed left New York and come to Illinois until this compiler started searching the records. But they are certainly buried there, in some part of their own ten-grave plot, and doubtless one or two of their grandchildren as well, before the family moved away to New Mazan, and later to Morris.

Lydia (White) Huston d. Sept. 4, 1855.

Children of Charles and Lydia:

32. i Charles[4], b. Mar. 12, 1812, Lebanon, N. Y.

ii Ruth[4], b. Feb. 16, 1816, d. 1834 Lebanon, New York, buried in the Campbell cemetery by the Reservoir on the Plot owned by her father Charles C. Huston.

LETTERS FROM ARCHIBALD HUSTON TO HIS SON ALONZO.

Ontario, April 19, 1868

My dear son: I received yours of the tenth yesterday. It had been to Ontario Office and was there re-mailed for Lakeside, consequently the delay. I was glad to hear from you once more and to hear that you are enjoying good health for it is one of the greatest blessings of this world that we know not how to prize till we are deprived of it. As I had heard nothing definite from you since you was here and my health has been so that I was not able to come out and see you, it has been gradually failing ever since you was here and I am just able to get from the house to the barn and partly do my chores. The rest of the family are all well.

Seth got a fall some two weeks ago and hurt his back so that he has been confined to the bed ever since but is on the gain. William has moved to Penfield, so you see I am left alone in Ontario with very poor health and but little prospect of improvement. I had a letter from Benjamin a month ago. They were all well, but pretty poor working by days works. I want to see you very much but am not able to come out and if you could come out here and see me it would be a great satisfaction to me. Come Saturday night and stay all night if you can and bring Louisa with you but I must close for I am getting tired. Give my love to Louisa and save a share for yourself.

This from your affectionate father,

Archibald Huston.

P. S. Direct your letters to Lakeside, New York.

Lakeside, Dec. 2, 1868.

My dear son: I write you a few lines to let you know that I still live but am very weak and feeble so that I am confined to the house and to bed a good deal of the time. I have been failing prety fast for the last two or three weeks with but little prospect of being any better. I want to see you very much and would like to have you come out and see me soon if you can come so as to stay all night. If you can and as much longer as convenient, but I am getting tired and must close so goodbye for this time.

From your affectionate father,

Archibald Huston.

d. Jan. 15, 1892, at Morris, Illinois.

Charles was an enterprising business man, as well as farmer. Of his early years in New York State there does not seem to be much record. He was in Lebanon in the 1840 census, yet he seemed, from the record of the birth of his children, to have travelled around that area considerably. The Mazon county historian states that he was an innkeeper in Syracuse, N. Y. before coming to Illinois. Of that I have no confirmation.

He was a surveyor, however, and when he came to Grundy County, Illinois, in 1845, he purchased land of McKeen and Co. and laid out 40 acres in streets, squares and lots, built a large building with hotel, store and hall, which he owned and operated, and farmed some land, all at the site of old Mazon town. Half of the hotel which he operated still stands as a farmhouse in old Mazon, the other half was destroyed by fire. When they moved to New Mazan, about 1875, they built the Cottage Hotel, and that too was destroyed by fire in 1888. The Post office was established in 1871 when the town was still called Centerville. Charles Huston was postmaster.

Having laid out the town, and the village square, he practically founded this old Mazan on the Chicago Bloomington trail. A couple of his experiences in surmounting the hardships of the pioneer country appear in the History of Grundy Co., Ill. and are so typical of early pioneer experiences that they are here quoted.

"Mr. Charles Huston relates a tedious experience in 1845. The community in the southern part of the township had been travel-bound for some time, and while each farmer had plenty of wheat and corn, their families were using boiled wheat or grated corn as a substitute for flour. Mr. Huston, a newcomer, had neither, and proposed to earn some flour by taking a load to mill for the community. His wagon was soon filled with wheat, and he set out on his journey.

He found but little difficulty in getting across streams by ferry or ford, but the frequent sloughs that blocked his way were not so easily surmounted. Four times each way he was obliged to unload his wagon and carry its contents around, while his team used their utmost powers to drag the empty wagon through the quagmires. On his return, his team worn out with the tedious journey, he was obliged to get assistance to get his empty wagon out of one of these places.

--There was but little stock in the township save the horses and oxen of the farmers' teams. A few cows and hogs were kept, but there was little market for them, and a good cow could be bought for six or eight dollars. Abundance of game relieved the settler of the necessity of buying meat.

Mr. Huston relates a trip to Chicago, for some drovers had found it necessary to slaughter some hogs which were unable to travel further, and engaged Mr. Huston to take a load to Chicago for twelve dollars. It was in January, and in company with another team he started by way of Morris. As they crossed the ice on the river at this place, the rain began to fall with the temperature. The roads gradually became heavier, and little more than half way to the city it was found necessary to leave a part of each load, buried in a hay stack, to prevent the pork from thawing, and proceed to the city with half a load, which was accomplished only after almost superhuman effort. In discharging their load, the teams were obliged to get the remainder, and deliver it in Chicago. In the meanwhile the mud of the roads was gradually getting deeper until the last trip was made with the wheels sinking to the hub most of the way.

The return trip Mr. Huston utilized by bringing a thousand feet of pine lumber for his building then going up at Mazon. As frequently occurs in an open winter, the weather changed to a cooler temperature as suddenly as it had warmed to a thaw, and the return trip was made through mud, gradually stiffening with the cold, which greatly retarded the progress homeward.

On arriving at Morris, the river was found banks full and impassable, and to save time the wagons were loaded with coal from Goold Ridge, and taken to Kendall County where it was disposed of to blacksmiths. On their return the river was found still impassable. Ice had formed in the center of the river, but at either margin was a space of running water which defied passage. After waiting some time and becoming impatient with delay, Mr. Huston conceived a plan to cross the stream. Using his lumber to bridge the margins on either side and and after testing the strength of the ice by pushing his wagon on it by hand, and then leading a horse on, he proceeded to cross. Hitching one horse on the end of the tongue of the wagon, and leading the other in the rear, the weight was so distributed as to promise a safe passage. Unfortunately the bridge on the south margin proved defective, and the wagon and horses were precipitated into the freezing water.

The leading horse proved true, and swam out, bringing the wagon on to solid ground. The led horse, however, refused to swim, and had to be brought to shore by the strength of the other animal. In the meantime Mr. Huston had spent an hour or two, waist deep in water getting his team in shape and saving his hard-earned lumber. The latter he piled up in a safe place on the bank and reached home nearly frozen after just three weeks' absence."

Nor was that all the trouble the early Illinois pioneers had. Under date of May 2, 1857, written from Morris, Illinois, Charles Huston writes the following letter to his uncle, Archibald[3] Huston of Wayne County, New York:

Dear Uncle:

I am constrained to send you a short epistle to inform you of some events which have transpired since we last met.

I was at Mason in March and the post-Master gave me a letter from you directed to my mother - but as my mother is not - I must try to answer you although it does bring to mind scenes painful to be remembered which is the reason I have not written you before. As I have become so familiar with scenes of mourning that they really unman me - Myself and three of my children is all that is left in this region in whose veins runs any of our blood.

My father died in Feb. a year after you was at our house in Mason as I believe you have been informed - Mother died a year ago last fourth day of September with a bilious diarreah of two or three weeks duration though not considered dangerous more than two or three days before her death -

We moved here last Christmas day to get our boys into school as we had none at all at Mason - but the move has been a disastrous move - our two oldest boys, Charles E. and DeWitt Clinton went to school during the winter and I earned one hundred & fifty dollars at the house building business. Mary Jane took care of her family and five young men boarders besides, at 3 dollars per week each, until the last week in March. Thus you see we had all of us good health and thought we were doing very well.

Five weeks ago I was taken sick and called a Doctor which we have not had to do, before, in four or five years, except for Father and Mother two or three days after I was taken, our youngest boy five and one half years old (Otis Henry) was taken too - and in about two days more we both broke out all over with the small-pox. We did not find out what we had for three days more when our doctor declared it smallpox and left us to our own destruction.

Our boarders left the same day - since which time we have none of us been away or anybody been in our house until today when we have all who are alive washed up and I have just returned from walking out with our two oldest boys.

Myself and wife and those two boys had been vaccinated and the disease was much modified although with me twas pretty hard - but the youngest boy (Otis Henry) had it verry hard the natural way - he died fourteen days after he was first taken sick - the day he died our youngest child, a girl, born only two days before my mother died - broke out with the disease and had it verry hard the natural way. She is now recovering though not yet able to walk.

Thus you see we too are afflicted, - though our calamities are great yet we feel a sympathy for you in yours.

We intend to move back to Mason in a few days - we shall go on to my new farm one mile west of where we lived when you was there & where I built a new house worth 12 hundred dollars last year and where I own four hundred acres - I have rented the old farm for three years for eighteen bushels of corn per acre per year for the whole farm - the corn to be delivered in Morris - Sixty acres of my new farm is rented for the same length of time on the same terms.

I sowed fifty acres of wheat there last fall but my tenant tells me it is all winter killed - so I have to go there and put the ground into corn. I am told the wheat is all killed through this part of the State. I hope you will write to me when you get this as I shall feel anxious to know how you are.

Just please to try to get some of my cousins to write to me. I want to know how many I have got and where they all are.

I remain, yours truly with affection.

Charles Huston

P. S. We have no idea how we got the small-pox as there had been no cases of the disease in this city for four or five years.

She writes her own account of herself:

"I went to England March 26, 1898, taking two children, Avery, eight years and Lillian, six years old. Mr. Dodge went some months earlier so I travelled alone. He returned, Apr. 27, 1907 with Avery. I did not come back until Oct. 2, 1907 with Lillian, Winifred and Isabelle. Avery and Lillian were born in Syracuse, Isabelle and Winifred born in England. We came home on the American line to Philadelphia and went to live in Camden, New Jersey, later we moved to Rochester then in a year to Buffalo for 12 years then 26 years at Orchard Park, coming to Lackawanna in Sept. 1946.

In England we lived first in Birmingham, then we moved to Manchester. The girls were born there. When Winifred was 9 months old we moved to Bixby heath, that is in Kent near London.

We went over in Bicycle days. Mr. Dodge his father and brother were in business in Syracuse called Dodge bicycle. He stayed in the business for a few years in England, then in the cotton machinery, after that he went to Coventry in the manufacture of Automobiles. I stayed in Manchester until he changed to Bixley Heath. We did not like the climate, it was so damp, but they had wonderful roads, and we each had a bicycle and a tandem. Saw a lot of the country. Then when he was in the Auto business we had a car a week at a time and saw a lot more, going to Dover, Margate, Ramsgate and Folkston, and all the old castles and cathedrals."

64. Arthur Lynn[6] Huston (Charles[5-4-3], William[2-1])

b. Sept. 7, 1866, in Paola, Kans.

m. April 10, 1892, at Milwaukee, Wisc. Esther Brown, b. Jan. 24, 1874, at Huntley, Ill. d. July 3, 1945 at Minneapolis, Minn. dau. of Horace L. and Frances (Allen) Brown, (of Hosea, Peris, Daniel, Daniel, John, John, John Browne of Plymouth)

Arthur was with his parents in Dakota Territory during much of his early life, and received but little formal education, as Dakota Territory was not organized enough to permit of much opportunity for good schooling. He did, however, pass his Boards, and teach a little country school at 17. He met his wife in Dakota, where she was living with her grandparents (who were also his, as they were first cousins) and they were married in Milwaukee, Wisc. He then went into the laundry business, operating a plant at Kansas City, and then in Cleveland, Ohio, and lastly in Evanston, Ill., where they made their home for many years.

After entering the real-estate business, he came to Minneapolis, Minn., where he is yet living.

At the time of the death of his first son, he purchased a grave plot in Evergreen cemetery, Morris, Ill. later buried his second son there, and in 1948 erected a monument on the plot, and placed there the cremated ashes of his wife.

Much of the material in the appendix article on his father, Charles, comes from his own reminiscences of the Dakota pioneer days, for his memory for events, places and names was remarkably accurate. He became, in his later years, a tragic victim of glaucoma, causing almost total blindness, but he remains cheerful and optimistic in spite of his advanced years and failing health. During the "boom" days of Florida real estate, he was at Tampa and Temple Terrace, and Tarpon Springs Fla. made and lost a great deal of money, and provided his daughter, the author of this genealogy, an attractive place to spend her University holidays.

His life span has embraced an era of dramatic changes, the establishment of the last pioneer frontiers in the West; the coming of the electric light, telephone, radio, aeroplane, and all of the things we consider necessities in modern living. He has watched three wars in which the United States has been engaged, and was born in the shadow of another, the Civil War. His father served in that; his brother served in the Spanish-American, stationed at the Phillipines; had his sons lived, they would have participated in World Wars I and II.

He has lived through a period of transition and change, the like of which cannot recur again in these United States, and it seems that he bridges two modes of life, two philosophies of existence, two definite historical eras. A rich tapestry of color has been woven into his life's span, and he has caught and understood the glamour, the imagery, and the great panorama it has presented.

Children:

i Lloyd Enos[7], b. Mar. 13, 1894, d. Nov. 16, 1899, buried Morris, Ill.

ii Francis Leaming[7], b. Oct. 27, 1892 d. June 14, 1893, buried Morris, Ill.

iii Aimee May[7], b. Oct. 24, 1907, m. Feb.4 1928, Lester John Eck.
son: Lester Huston[8] Eck, b. Mar. 7, 1933, Minneapolis, Minn.

The above daughter, Aimee May Huston is the author of this genealogy, and so we digress to state a few biographical and other facts.

She was born on October 24, 1907, at Evanston, Illinois, and spent her early years in that town. High School days were spent partly with her parents in Minneapolis, at West High, and partly in Chicago, Illinois with her grandparents, where she attended Lindblom High. She graduated from the University of Minnesota September 3, 1927, receiving her Bachelor of Arts degree, with a major in English Literature, and a minor in French, and Philosophy. She went to work at the State Bank and Trust Company at Evanston, Illinois, in the advertising department, and stayed there until her marriage, on February 4, 1928, to Lester John Eck, of St. Paul, who was born February 21, 1901, son of Andrew and Amanda (Johnson) Eck, both born in Gamla Boda Sweden, and emigrated as young children with their parents to America.

After her marriage, she worked for some years as Church secretary at Hennepin Avenue Methodist Church, Minneapolis, under Dr. Richard C. Raines. Lester and Aimee built a home at 3810 Ewing Avenue South, Minneapolis, which they now occupy, and on March 7, 1933, their son, Lester Huston[8] Eck, was born. He attends the Blake School for Boys at Hopkins, Minnesota.

She became interested in genealogical research, and began the tracing of family lines. This led to her membership in the D.A.R. (No. 363797, under the service of William[2] Huston of this genealogy); she joined the Society of the Mayflower Descendants, through maternal descent from George Soule, Richard Warren and Francis Cooke, and is State Historian of that organization. For three years she has been State Genealogical Records Chairman for the D.A.R. concerned with the compiling and presenting to Washington of genealogical data. She is a member of Sigma Kappa Sorority, the College Woman's Club, Minnesota State Historical Society.

The study of genealogy led to an intense interest in history, and she is working on her Master's degree in History at the University of Minnesota, writing a thesis on Douglas County, South Dakota, where her grandfather, Charles[5] Huston (No. 41), founded the town of Huston, D.T.

Her husband, Lester John Eck, (see Who's Who in Minnesota, 1941) graduated from the University of Minnesota in 1923, holds his Bachelor and Master's degrees in Chemical Engineering, and a Bachelor of Laws from the Minnesota College of Law. He is Vice-President of the Minneapolis Gas Company, and considered one of the foremost gas engineers in this country. He is a member of numerous civic organizations, Lion's Club, Chamber of Commerce, etc., and is a member of Alpha Chi Sigma fraternity, Minnesota Professional Engineers, American Gas Association. His hobbies are photography, gardening, and camping.

END OF GENERATION VI

CHARLES ENOS HUSTON
1841-1917.

A brief survey of his life and times.

Fully to understand the pioneering spirit which motivated CHARLES ENOS HUSTON to come to Dakota Territory and eventually found the little town of Huston, Douglas County, it is necessary to take a brief glance at the record of his ancestral forbears.

His paternal great-great grandfather, William Huston, was a native of Voluntown, Connecticut, where in 1745, he married Agnes Hinman. These families were from the North of Ireland, of Scotch descent, where they had settled in Tyrone, Ulster County, after the siege of Londonderry in 1685, under William of Orange. William Huston had pioneered to a new country, breaking all ties with the old.

William Huston (2) who in 1781, married Elizabeth Campbell, of Voluntown, served three enlistments from Connecticut in the Revolutionary War. Then he went to Rupert, Vermont and on to Lebanon, Madison County, New York, where in the lush land of rolling hills and fine timber he settled to live. He had pioneered from the early New England Frontier into the wild and undeveloped Central section of New York State.

Charles Campbell Huston (3), his son, married in Lebanon, New York in 1809, Lydia White, raised their son in that farming community, and in 1845 pushed on to Grundy County, Illinois. With them to this new land, went their son, Charles White Huston.

Charles White Huston (4) married in 1835, in West Eaton, New York, Mary Jane Enos, and the whole family in 1845 started out, made their way down the old Chicago Bloomington Trail, and finally stopped at a spot near Mazon Creek, where he and his father bought land of James McKean and laid out 40 acres in streets, squares and lots, founding the town of Mazon.

Charles Enos Huston (5), the subject of this sketch, was born February 16, 1841, in Madison County, New York, and came out with his parents and grandparents to Illinois. Thus he began his early years in the spirit of pushing westward to new lands. He married Mariette Brown of Huntley Illinois, November 25, 1865. She was the daughter of Hosea and Sebrina (Lockwood) Brown. The Brown family traces back to John Browne, Gentleman, of Plymouth Colony, and the Lockwoods to Robert who came over in 1630 from England to Watertown, Mass. Charles was attending Normal School at Bloomington, Illinois, when the Civil War broke out, and he enlisted after the first three month's call to serve in the 33rd Illinois Infantry from 1860-1865. He was promoted to Corporal, and fought in the battle of Fredericksburg in 1861, and in the siege of Vicksburg. Throughout his life he was an active G.A.R.

Thus we see generation after generation of breaking soil in a new land. This had undoubtedly placed in the blood of Charles Enos Huston this relentless urge to press forward to new and untried lands. There was but one frontier left, our lands West of the Mississippi, which were being opened up by the Government for homesteading and timber claim.

Soon after his marriage, he made a brief foray into Kansas, around the town of Paola, to look over the possibilities of settlement. His first son, my father, Arthur Lynn Huston, was born there in 1866. But the possibilities for settlement did not look favorable and he returned to Mazon.

In 1879 he made a trip out to Dakota Territory to look over the country, and found that there was good farm land, fine possibilities for settlement, and was being opened up by the Government to be claimed by soldier preemtion.

He returned to Mazon to gather up his family and possessions and thus completed five straight generations of Huston pioneers ever pushing Westward.

When he came back to Mazon from his exploration trip, he brought back with him two young antelope which he had found on the Dakota prairie. He carried them in the cuffs of his raincoat, and they were so small they had to be raised on a bottle. They ran all over the

During Zero Option 1815, the sovereignty of this country was born formally in Lehi, in Marion County, New York, and came out with six people and grandparents to Illinois. Then he began his early years in his pursuit of working restored to new lands. The married Barbara Brown of Mountain Village, Monterey Co, 1880. She was the daughter of Moses and Rebecca (Hazelwood) Brown. The Brown family moved back to Zion Prairie, Marion Twp., of Tippecanoe County, and the Cadwells to Mount and some over in 1860 from England to Watertown, Mass. Charles was attending Norwal School at Bloomington, Illinois, when the Civil War broke out, and he entered Company Five Forty-Nine Infantry from Lexington. He was elected to Corporal, and fought in the battle of Fredericksburg in 1861, and in the siege of Vicksburg. Throughout his life he was an ardent Civil.

When he was promoted after operation of Corpus-ing work in a pine lumb. In his last duty placed on the Board of Charities Jail Service Club secretary urge to power Tuesday on new and rebuild Lights. Three kit but for Straight left, one lunch Rest of the Directing, while more being opened up by the Government for Dominateding and Pioneer Clubs.

Upon this marriage, he took a half time into Service, except the time of Duties, to left over the responsibilities of Settlement. His first army, Mr Theory, Senior Upon Service, and Jones Upon in Lodge. But the responsibilities for Settlements his own home Economic and be employed as Indian.

In 1873 he made a trip out to Omaha Township to look over the country, and found that there was good farm land, five hospitable men coun-tinued, and was being opened up by the Government to be claimed by Native pioneers.

He returned to Cass to prepare to his family and possessions and find employment for the winter operations of Boston planning over planning Depa-ment.

When he came back to Omaha from his returning trip, he brought back with him two young men who he had hired on the Illinois prairies. He worked them in the fields of his farmers, and they were so well liked that he planned to a double. That was all over the town of Mazon, and had their home in the ice house, where they grew so large that they foraged the neighbor's gardens, after learning to leap the barred gate. They were finally presented to a park in Peoria, the first tangible bit of Dakota to find its way into central Illinois.

Charles Huston loaded his possessions onto a freight car, early in 1880, and shipped them via the Hastings and Dakota division of the Milwaukee Road to Alexandria, the farthest point west that the railroad then ran. The tracks were being laid to Mitchell, the town next beyond, but both the road and the town, in 1880, were in an embryonic state.

He took his family with him, his wife, who was the postmistress at Mazon, and would later assume the same post in their new town; his three children, Arthur, Nellie and Harry. They went to Rockport, on the James River, popularly called "Jim" River. It was a little village with a drug store, grocery store, and a little hotel. It was named because of the rock quarries near the settlement, and practically everything was built of rock in the town. A grist mill had been constructed by the Russian Mennonite Society, whose community was six miles down the Jim River from Rockport. The mill was operated by them, and they ground flour, corn, and wheat, and had a water power dam to run the mill, as well as a huge stone grinder.

Wanting to feel his way carefully before finally settling, Charles Huston rented a hotel in Rockport and operated it for the year of 1880-1881. He had had considerable experience in the hotel business, as he had owned and operated the hotel at Mazon.

Behind the hotel in Rockport was a huge barn, and it was a stop on the stage line running from Yankton to Mitchell. The stage horses were kept there, and the driver of the Deadwood coach (a style of coach with swing-on straps) would roar up to the stone barn to change horses. The coming of the stage coach was one of the events of the small community. It brought mail, passengers, and some supplies, and operated up and down the Jim River with as much regularity as the weather and the trails would permit.

The winter of 1880 was a hard one in the Rockport Community. Snow began to fall in October, and the ground was completely covered by a heavy blanket until May 15, 1881. Houses were almost completely covered over, and the snow drifted between the hotel and the barn where the stock and feed for the stage coach were kept, so that a tunnel five feet wide and seven feet high, dug from the hotel to the barn, was the only access the whole winter long. Fuel was a serious problem.. The railroad, which was being laid but was not in use, beyond Alexandria, had already installed the ties and the rails, but the Rockport community, desperately cold, had been forced to go out and rip up the rails and use the wooden ties of the roadbed for fuel. Naturally, it was an expense to the Milwaukee road, but they did not demurr, as they realized the vital necessity of having settlers in the community. The twists of hay and grain, which Charles' young son Arthur made by the hour, were not sufficient, nor were the few green willows baked and dried out, and then placed in the pot-bellied stoves of the farm houses and the hotel. There was no coal.

In May of 1881, the floods began, as a result of the heavy snows going off, and the Jim River overflowed its banks, covering over a mile in width. The town of Rockport was up on a ledge, but the mill was down on the river bank, perhaps a quarter of a mile from the hotel. During their active season, the mill ground up the corn brought in by the farmers who arrived with it tied in a sack, and hung over the horses saddles. The mill ground the grain for half the produce, since most of the farmers had no money with which to pay.

There was a hog pen by the mill where they fattened hogs from the refuse. When the flood came up, the hog pen was inundated, and the hogs swam out, climbing up on a platform which was used for the wagons to drive up and unload their produce. The stranded, squealing pigs, frightened and marooned, were in danger of drowning or starving. Charles Huston went to the Mennonites with a proposition, that he would attempt to rescue their hogs for half the stock. He took his wagon rack, boarded it up, made a raft of it, towed it up the roaring river with a rowboat, loaded on the pigs, hauled them up the river to a landing place, and reaped as a reward a half-dozen good, fat, marketeable hogs!

Meanwhile, Charles Huston had been deciding upon where he eventually wished to stake his claim, and with Al Mather, John Baird and Burt Tyler, went on a tour of inspection on the land bordering Choteau Creek. They decided to file claim on the land, and Charles took three quarters of a section of township 196, section 3, part in homestead, part in timber claim. These fine farm lands were in Douglas County, 35 miles from Rockport. According to the Andreas Atlas of 1884, the township of Huston, which was located that summer, was on the eastern boundary of Douglas County, just north of East Choteau, and south of Lincoln counties. To the West was the township of Independence where the village of Huston was established on one section of Charles Huston's land. It was six miles north of the Yankton Indian Reservation, which comprised the northern half of Charles Mix County. Indian affairs were administered from Fort Randall, the Military Reservation.

Charles Huston was a surveyor and locator. Enterprising and enthusiastic over this country that he was to make his home, he wrote, in 1881, an article to the National Tribune, describing the possibilities of opening up homestead farms in Douglas County. As a result of that article, Ohio, Wisconsin and Illinois families began pouring into the section in 1881 and 1882, and Charles located them on their quarter-sections all over the county. He charged them $5.00 for the survey and locating, and he began a tide of settlers who kept him so busy that many were the days he was taking in $50.00 to $60.00 in fees. As a result of this tide, settlers had soon claimed all the available land in Douglas County, and he began locating them as far north as Campbell and McPherson Counties by 1883 and 1884. Being a civil engineer with a flair for salesmanship, he feathered his own nest for a time very satisfactorily, and with complete honesty.

Which, certainly, is more than could be said for the political activity in the county during the years of 1880-81. Governor Nehemiah Ordway, of New Hampshire, who had been appointed in 1880 by President Hays to fill this most important post, apparently was not adverse to unscrupulous methods. Much could be said pro and con of his management of the affairs of the territory. Undoubtedly he had much pressure brought to bear upon him by "Boss" Alexander MacKenzie, who was operating with a high and open hand. There is no doubt that Ordway did do something toward putting the county on a sounder financial basis, but according to Edna Waldo, in her publication, "Dakotah", an informal study of Territorial days, published 1931, and gleaned from newspaper clippings, he was rejected all along the line.

The Jamestown ALERT wrote in August, 1883, "If Governor Ordway was as bad as the Yankton Papers represent him to be he would still be in the comparative relation to Yankton that Lot held to Sodom and Gommorah." To which the DAKOTIAN replied, "We hope the Alert will use its best efforts to keep this information from Ordway. If he finds out there are any lots in Sodom and Gommorah, he will at once enter upon a scheme with the townsite owners to transform the two settlements into county seats!"

Be that as it may, he had his finger in the Douglas County pie, and allowed Walter H. Brown, from Iowa, to establish by very questionable tactics, a mythical town of Brownsdale on the western banks of Andes Creek, some six miles from the spot where Charles Huston had located. Here Brown established the first County seat, and as commissioner, he and his "gang" began issuing bonds and warrants against the county.

The group of settlers at Huston, unhappy over the administration of their county finances, undertook one night, with guns and ropes and other forceful instruments of coercion, an expedition to Brownsdale. The result of that posse's activities that night was that the Browndale gang left the section rather hurriedly, and under considerable pressure. The Huston settlers collected the records, took them out of the county into the Indian Reservation, where they were burned. Some of the records were brought on in to Huston, which then for a short time became the County seat, until an election could be held, at which time Grandview won out by eleven votes, so the third county seat was established there in 1883. Later it was moved to Armour.

The little village of Huston was growing. A roster of the early settlers in the vicinity include the names of John Bean, from Wisconsin, James and Robert Brown, who ran the general store, Ed Waldron, Al Mather, John Beard, Tom Wohlford from Mazon, Ill. who ran the blacksmith shop. John Bean had built quite a pretentious house right across the road from Charles Huston, and his home became a boarding and rooming house for the settlers as they arrived to take up their lands.

Charles Huston had brought into the section as well, his own relatives; Amelia Scott, who took the other quarter section of Section 3 on a widow's pension claim; Nell Benedict, on the same terms; Hosea Brown, father of Mariette, Charles' wife, and his sons Willis and Horace Brown. They were all from Huntley, McHenry County, Illinois.

In 1881 the post-office was established at Huston, in Charles' house, with Mariette as postmistress, just as she had been in Mazon, Ill. Until the duties became too heavy, she continued to hold the office, then it was moved up to the store, and the Brown brothers took it over. As the town died away, it eventually was discontinued, but was a regular postal station until early 1884.

After the post-office was established, they built a little church on the corner. The family coming out from Huntley were all Baptists, and so the other settlers donated and aided in the building of the first Baptist church - indeed, of the first church in the entire area. It was built of lumber, hauled down from Alexandria, as was Charles Huston's house. Some of the early squatters built their houses of sod, but most of the permanent settlers had good frame dwellings, some rather large. Charles Huston's house, for instance, had a dining room, living room, bedroom downstairs, kitchen, four bedrooms upstairs, and a screen porch completely around it. John Bean's was just as large, and also of seasoned pine lumber. On the other hand, Nell Benedicts was of sod.

When the Huston family went out onto the prairie from Rockport in 1881, they moved first into a house which Charles had built for Amelia Scott, his sister-in-law, where they lived until their own home was completed. Six miles away was the Yankton Indian Reservation, and the Indian agency was 25 miles away. There never was a day that there weren't Indians camped around the house.

They put up their teepees at a reasonable distance from the house, but on the Huston land. There were half-a-dozen or so teepees with their Indian families, and they were beggars. The living room in the house was large, and they would come right into the room, quietly, and without any warning, to beg.

About a dozen of them one day came into the house and sat along the wall, squat-legged, pointing to their mouths, expecting Mariette to feed them. She had become tired of these repeated and persistent boarders, so she opened the door and told them to get out, but they merely ambled out to look under the upside down milk pans in the sun, to see if there was any food. Finding none, they stoically returned and took up their posts around the wall. Finally in desperation Mariette went out and got a broom, and motioned them to go out. She began to swing the broom, and, little mite that she was, the Indian bucks hesitated for a moment, surprised at such determination, no doubt, then tumbled out laughing. It must have been a sight to behold a dozen or so of those strapping bucks being swept out by one little woman.

About thirty miles away at Fort Randall, the Indian Agency, down the Missouri river, was the spot to which they brought Sitting Bull, who had been captured by the Military Government. He was brought down on a flat-boat, and when he arrived, he refused to get off the boat. The stevedores had to get a rope and tie him, carrying him from the craft. Perhaps one of the early examples of a "sit-down" strike.

The Sioux Indian language was, as all Indian tongues, colorful and rhythmic. The bucks and squaws used to teach Charles Huston's children some of their words, sitting around the campfires of an evening. They learned to count "Wancha, nopa, yamane, topa, zapata, shakope, shako, shahundoa, nopachawonka, wikechamana, akawazhe, akanopa, akayamane, etc."

Arthur, son of Charles, tells of a dance the Indians were having one night at the Reservation. He went down, and was the only white man there. The squaws and the bucks were dancing in circles and chanting, each in their respective ends of the dance space. Finally they passed the hat, and Arthur threw in a dollar bill. That necessitated building a council fire, to discuss the disposition of so much capital, and after much consultation, it was finally decided to buy a dog and have a feast. On his way home that night, he heard a moaning from a ravine below the bridge, and upon investigating. found an Indian squaw hacking herself, bleeding profusely, as a penitent measure for the loss of her husband. No amount of persuasion would have caused her to desist her lonely and painful ritual, so Arthur just went on home.

Educational opportunities in Douglas County, as elsewhere in pioneering communities, were limited, and not of the best. Huston had the first organized County School, with W. H. Rowe, as teacher, in 1882.

In 1880, however, Arthur Huston, son of Charles, went to school in Rockport to Albert Bemer, who taught all the grades from one to eight. After moving to the homestead farm, he received instuction in German from Andrew Schatz, one of the settlers in the Community. In the year of 1883, Arthur went up to New Holland, a village ten miles or so from Huston, populated almost entirely by a group direct from Holland, Europe. They had quite a thriving village there, published a newspaper, had a store, blacksmith shop and harness shop.

John T. Matthew was superintendent of schools, and Arthur took his examination on Matthew's farm, receiving his 2nd grade certificate to teach. He was seventeen years of age, and had never finished grade school himself!

Arthur undertook the school at New Holland for that winter and had 65 children graded from primer to high school. The older ones had had their mathematics in Holland, and were learning the English language in first grade here. One boy, for instance, Pieter Von Emmert, was working in the primer, a tall six-footer, bigger and older than his teacher, who was fighting valiently to keep ahead of Pieter in algebra. On weekends Arthur would go home and have his father help him on the next week's assignments to keep ahead of his students. Pieter Von Emmert became county superintendent of schools.

As the railroad moved Westward, and the county seat moved into Armour, the little towns which had sprung up by virtue of community groups began to wane. In Huston, the Browns had moved their store away, the county seat and post office were gone, and some of the settlers began to gravitate toward the larger centers. Huston was fast becoming a ghost town - empty dwellings filled only with their memories of a short period of lusty, rugged prairie life.

Charles Huston, still enterprising and full of foresight, saw the coming town of Armour. It was the new terminal of the railroad from Sioux City, called the Sioux City and Dakota Division. It was named after P. D. Armour of packing house fame, who was a member of the Milwaukee Railroad Board of Directors. Many of these towns were named for the Milwaukee road officers. In 1884, Charles Huston sold his farm and buildings, and bought a lot in Armour, upon which he built the Orient Hotel. By 1885 this hotel was fully constructed, a fine brick building, and Charles and his wife, with their family, ran and operated it with great success, until 1890.

Finally deciding to leave Dakota, and go on West, Charles Huston in 1892 went to Eugene, Oregon, and operated a prune farm. The first year he raised a crop of prunes there, he shipped a carload back to the Earl Fruit Company in Chicago on South Water St. They drew on him for $100.00 for charges, which absorbed the carload of prunes - so he went out of the prune business.

Eventually Charles and Mariette went on out to Vancouver, Washington, to live at the home of their daughter, Nellie, who had married George Du Bois, prominent west coast lumberman. Here they spent many happy years, he energetic and active, in city and lodge affairs, and always tinkering with his carpentering at which he was very adept. He built for Nellie's family a house, which we are all still using as a summer cottage, down at Ocean Park, Washington. Mariette died on Jan. 2, 1912, and Charles continued to live in the little house they had built at the rear of the Du Bois home. His letters indicate that he was lonely, yet content, for he had indeed lived a full and satisfying life, and had participated in establishing and securing the last of our American frontiers.

On September 1, 1917, the Vancouver, Washington newspaper published the following obituary notice:

C. E. HUSTON ACCIDENTALLY KILLED THIS MORNING.

Charles E. Huston, of 514 W. 9th St. this city, and C. A. Johnson of 59th St. Portland, were killed this morning at 10:15 when the Ford automobile driven by Mr. Huston ran off the bridge at Ruthten, and fell about twenty feet to the railroad tracks below.

--The bodies were taken to Hood River about two miles distant, and will arrive in Vancouver this evening.

Mr. Huston with Mr. Johnson and his family had been on a visit to Walla Walla. Mr. Huston and Mr. Johnson were returning home when the accident occured.

--Charles E. Huston was well known in this city. He has been prominently connected with the G.A.R. for some years, serving twice as its commander. He was a member of the Mt. Hood Lodge of Masons in this city. -- He was 76 years old the fifteenth of last March. He came here in 1898 from South Dakota, where he served in the Territorial Legislature during the session of 1882. He was a civil engineer and millwright by profession. Previous to coming here he was post commander of the G.A.R. in his home town in South Dakota.

--Immediately upon receipt of the news of the death the local G.A.R. which were in session in the Library Hall adjourned out of respect to the memory of their comrade. They will meet again Monday at 10:30 to arrange for their attendance with due honors, at his funeral.

And so ends the story of another of America's pioneers.

Among the papers of Alta Sevilla (Huston) Smart, (No. 53), who died in December of 1949, her daughters found a Summons, issued by the Supreme Court of the State of New York under date of February 25, 1892. This copy was served on Mary Catherine Huston, 3rd wife of Benjamin Huston (No. 36). Each of the below named defendants received a similar summons.

This paper was put into the hands of the author of this genealogy just as the book was in its final assembly, but before completion of the index, so these names appear in the index of persons.

The paper documents relationships already shown in this genealogy, but it also shows some marriages not known to the author, as well as later places of residence of some of the descendants. Therefore, I here transcribe a brief of the summons, a photostatic copy of which will be retained in my possession. The original summons will be in the possession of the Smart family.

It appears that one Cora M. Jones was trying to get a clear title to some property in Henrietta, Monroe County, New York. This property had been in the possession of Nancy Huston Titus (No. 12), stepmother of the deponent's mother, and had fallen into the possession of said Nancy Titus' heirs. Cora Jones brings suit to clear the title to this land.

She names the following heirs of Nancy Titus as Defendants in her suit, to wit:
